Mission Statement

The Helen Kellogg Institute for International Studies promotes comparative international research on themes relevant to contemporary society. Building on a core interest in Latin America, the Institute fosters research on many regions of the world.

It supports the research and educational mission of the University of Notre Dame by providing faculty, students, and visiting scholars with a supportive intellectual community.

It attempts to project the University onto the global stage and to expand understanding of democracy, development, social justice, and important international problems facing humanity. The Institute forms an integral part of Notre Dame's Catholic mission by addressing normative and scholarly concerns that embody the values reflected in Catholic social thought.

“The Kellogg Institute embodies what we want to do throughout the University: scholarly leadership, profound and powerful educational experiences for our students, and the distinctive values and traditions of a Catholic University.”

—Rev. John I. Jenkins, CSC, President of the University of Notre Dame

Director's Letter

This annual report provides information about our activities in research, education, and public outreach for 2006–07.

When I first became director in 1997, the Kellogg Institute was already recognized as one of the world's leading centers for the study of democratization and as a leading social science center that focused on Latin America. During my two terms as director, we have tried to build on these strengths and to branch out in some new ways. As a research institute, we have tried to be faithful to Fr. Hesburgh's desire for an institute that speaks to some of the world's and the Catholic Church's most pressing issues.

On the research front, I especially wish to salute my colleagues Jorge Bustamante, Rev. Virgilio Elizondo, Alexandra Guisinger, Frances Hagopian, Tin-bor Victoria Hui, Sabine MacCormack, and Rev. Tom Streit, CSC, for their notable achievements this past year (pgs. 2–3).

Our undergraduate programs continued to grow and thrive in 2006–07, thanks to the excellent work of Ted Beatty, associate professor of history and director of the Latin American Studies Program (2004–07), and Holly Rivers, student programs coordinator and assistant director of the Latin American Studies Program (see pg. 14 for details). We continued the expansion of our programs in Africa and for the first time ever sent some students for summer internships in Asia.

We have continued to make a mark on graduate education at Notre Dame (pg. 19). For example, our former student (and my frequent coauthor) Anibal Pérez-Liñán was tenured at the University of Pittsburgh, and Cambridge University Press recently published his book, Presidential Impeachment and the New Political Instability in Latin America.

Our Visiting Fellows Program attracted excellent scholars and influential policy leaders. The visiting fellows in 2006–07 featured an attractive blend of senior and junior scholars, some individuals who have held major leadership positions in public life, and an exceptional diversity of national backgrounds: Brazil, Colombia, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Paraguay, Peru, South Korea, and the US (pg. 5).

In 2006–07 we began a new practice of using our endowment to strategically fund faculty positions. In recent years, the Institute had lost talented faculty members who had contributed significantly to Kellogg. Without the ability to make faculty appointments, it was also exceedingly difficult to build new areas of research excellence. Accordingly, Kellogg's Faculty Committee voted in May 2006 to begin funding some faculty positions. The first result of this decision is that by the fall of 2008, we will have four very strong Latin Americanists in the History Department, creating the foundation for a nationally competitive program.

Under the leadership of Chair Mark McGrath, we launched a new Advisory Board in October 2006. Mark is the perfect chair. He grew up in Panama, and he has a deep concern and passion about Latin America and the world. His uncle was the legendary archbishop of Panama, Marcos McGrath, CSC. Mark cares deeply about Notre Dame, having attended Notre Dame before going on to a very successful career in business. He was senior director with McKinsey and Company until retiring in December 2004. With his leadership, we have assembled an impressive Board (pg. 32) that will offer support as we move ahead.

My colleague, Ted Beatty, is serving as interim director of the Kellogg Institute in 2007–08 while I enjoy the first year of a two-year leave. A historian, Ted works on the economic and technological history of Mexico. He did an excellent job as director of our undergraduate Latin American Studies Program for three years. I am grateful for his leadership at the Institute this academic year.

I wish to thank the University leadership for its support, the Institute's Advisory Board for its counsel, my faculty colleagues for their involvement and interest in our shared intellectual enterprise, and the graduate students and undergraduates who have enriched the Institute and my life. Finally, thanks to the staff for its hard work and good cheer.

Faculty Grants and Honors

MacCormack Inducted into American Academy of Arts and Sciences

Faculty Fellow SABINE G. MACCORMACK, Theodore M. Hesburgh, CSC, Professor of Arts and Letters at the University of Notre Dame, has been elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences (AAAS). She will be formally inducted at a ceremony this fall in Cambridge, MA.

Among the 14 other Notre Dame faculty members who have been elected to the AAAS, four are Kellogg faculty fellows. They are:

ROBERTO DAMATTA,

Rev. Edmund P. Joyce Professor of Anthropology; REV. GUSTAVO GUTIÉRREZ, OP, John Cardinal O'Hara Professor of Theology; GUILLERMO O'DONNELL, Helen Kellogg Professor of Political Science; and LAWRENCE E. SULLIVAN, John A. O'Brien Professor of Theology.

Founded during the American Revolution by John Adams, John Hancock and others, the AAAS is the nation's leading learned society. It recognizes individuals who have made outstanding contributions to science, scholarship, public affairs, and the arts. The 2007 class of new members includes 226 scholars, scientists, and artists, and civic, corporate, and philanthropic leaders from 27 states and 13 countries.

Bustamante Receives Lifetime Achievement Award

Faculty Fellow JORGE A. BUSTAMANTE, Eugene and Helen Conley Professor of Sociology, was named the 2007 recipient of the American Sociological Association's Cox-Johnson-Frazier Award.

One of the most prestigious professional honors in sociology, the award is given to a sociologist for a lifetime of research, teaching, and service to the community.

"Jorge has been an absolutely tireless champion for the human rights of immigrants all over the world," said Daniel J. Myers, chair of the Department of Sociology at Notre Dame. "His combination of prolific scholarship and informed policy advocacy has brought him the respect of governments, nongovernmental organizations, individuals, and the academy."

In 2006, Bustamante was nominated by Mexico's Congress for the Nobel Peace Prize for his advocacy of human and labor rights for immigrants. His more than 200 scholarly publications were recognized in 1998 when he received the Premio Nacional de Ciencias, the highest award granted to scientists by the Mexican government.

Hagopian Awarded Wilson Center Fellowship

Faculty Fellow FRANCES HAGOPIAN has been awarded a 2007–08 fellowship from the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars.

Hagopian, the Michael P. Grace II Associate Professor of Latin American Studies, will spend the academic year working on a project titled "Reorganizing Political Representation in Latin America: Parties, Program, and Patronage in Argentina, Brazil, Chile, and Mexico."

She is author of Traditional Politics and Regime Change in Brazil (Cambridge University Press, 1996) and coeditor of The Third Wave of Democratization in Latin America: Advances and Setbacks (Cambridge University Press, 2005), as well as a member of the Editorial Board of the Latin American Research Review.

Established by an act of Congress in 1968, the Wilson Center is the nation's official living memorial to the only American president with a doctoral degree, Woodrow Wilson. A nonpartisan institute for advanced study and dialogue, the center brings preeminent thinkers to Washington to interact with policymakers and public officials.

Elizondo Awarded Catholic Theological Society's Highest Honor

Faculty Fellow REV. VIRGILIO P. ELIZONDO received the John Courtney Murray Award from the Catholic Theological Society of America (CTSA) in June.

The Murray Award is the CTSA's highest honor for distinguished achievement in theology.

Fr. Elizondo, the Notre Dame Professor of Pastoral and Hispanic Theology, became prominent as an advocate for the underpaid and exploited Mexican-American laborers in his archdiocese during the early 1970s, establishing the Mexican-American Cultural Center at Assumption Seminary.

He is the author of numerous books, including The Future is Mestizo (Crossroad, 1992), Galilean Journey: The Mexican-American Promise (Orbis Books, 1983) and A God of Incredible Surprises: Jesus of Galilee (Rowman & Littlefield, 2003). In 1997, he received the Laetare Medal, the highest honor of the University of Notre Dame.

Streit Awarded Christus Magister Medal

Faculty Fellow REV. THOMAS G. STREIT, CSC, was awarded the University of Portland's highest honor, the Christus Magister Medal.

Streit, director of Notre Dame's Haiti Program, was honored for his efforts to eliminate lymphatic filariasis (LF), a mosquito-borne infection that affects more than 120 million people throughout the tropics, and for his passionate advocacy on behalf of its victims.

An assistant research professor of biological sciences,

Streit established Notre Dame's Haiti Program, an initiative at the forefront of a global alliance of partners collaborating to eliminating LF (more commonly known as elephantiasis).

The Gates Foundation awarded Notre Dame a $5.2 million grant in 1999 to develop a model program for the global elimination of LF. In October 2006, Notre Dame received an additional $4.4 million for four years to continue the effort.

The Haiti Program has delivered more than 2.5 million treatments for filariasis and associated conditions thus far, and Haiti is on track toward the historic goal of eliminating LF by 2013.

MICHAEL COPPEDGE was appointed to the editorial board of The Journal of Politics.

GEORGES ENDERLE received the University of Notre Dame's Reinhold Niebuhr Award, in recognition of his work to inspire and instigate "consideration of corporate freedom and responsibility" throughout the world as cofounder of the European Business Ethics Network. As well, Enderle has been instrumental in introducing the debate about business ethics to the People's Republic of China.

ISABEL FERREIRA GOULD was awarded a 2007 fellowship for research and manuscript writing from the Fundação Luso-Americana para o Desenvolvimento (FLAD). She will spend the 2007–08 academic year writing and editing her book manuscript, "Genealogias do Império: Representações da Família e do Colonialismo no Romance Português."

TERESA GHILARDUCCI received a $20,000 Heinz Endowments grant for a survey for institutional investors of specialized private equity, venture capital, and real estate funds.

REV. DANIEL GROODY, CSC, received a visiting research fellowship to the Refugee Study Centre at Oxford University, where he will conduct further research on theology and immigration during the 2007–08 academic year.

ALEXANDRA GUISENGER received a Leitner Fellowship to spend the 2007–08 academic year at the MacMillan Center for International and Area Studies at Yale University. She will research global patterns of economic policy liberalization.

TIN-BOR VICTORIA HUI was awarded a 2006–07 fellowship by the East Asia Institute, Seoul, Korea. Her 2005 work, War and State Formation in Ancient China and Early Modern Europe (Cambridge University Press), won the American Political Science Association's 2006 Robert L. Jervis and Paul W. Schroeder Best Book Award on International History and Politics. It also garnered the 2006 Edgar S. Furniss Book Award, presented by the Mershon Center for International Security Studies, Ohio State University.

RICHARD A. JENSEN's project "How Effective Are Technology Transfer Officers in Achieving Their Objectives?" was funded by the Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation for Entrepreneurship.

GEORGE LOPEZ was named to the Theodore M. Hesburgh, CSC, Chair in Peace Studies.

CAROLYN NORDSTROM received the Rev. Edmund P. Joyce, CSC, Award for Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching, as well as the Spirit of Notre Dame Award for inspirational faculty.

MARY ELLEN O'CONNELL was appointed chair of the International Law Association's Study Committee on the Meaning of War, which has a four-year mandate to report on the meaning of war in international law.

REV. ROBERT PELTON, CSC, won Notre Dame's Grenville Clark Award for pursuing "with indefatigable determination and commitment" local and global causes of peace and human rights for more than 50 years.

J. SAMUEL VALENZUELA, with REV. TIMOTHY SCULLY, CSC, and NICOLÁS SOMMA, won the Federico Gil Prize of the Chilean Political Science Association for the best paper presented in the field of comparative politics at its eighth annual meeting, held in Santiago in November 2006.

Kellogg Grants to Notre Dame Faculty

The Kellogg Institute awarded funding to 18 Notre Dame faculty to support collective research projects, professional collaborations, travel, and event sponsorship.

SAMUEL AMAGO, assistant professor of Spanish in romance languages and literatures, received research funding for a project entitled "Immigration, Transnationalism, and the Globalization of New Spanish Cinema."

VIVA BARTKUS, associate professor of management in the Mendoza College of Business, received a stipend to travel to Oxford University to finish a book on social capital.

MICHAEL COPPEDGE, associate professor of political science, received a Faculty Residential Fellowship to complete a book project on research methods in comparative politics and a critical survey of research on democratization. The Faculty Residential Fellowship covers the fellow's salary for a semester of leave, during which time s/he conducts research while in residence at the Kellogg Institute.

REV. ROBERT DOWD, CSC, assistant professor of political science, was awarded research funding for the project "Religiosity and Political Culture: Christians, Muslims and Spiritual Capital in Sub-Saharan Africa."

CHRISTOPHER FOX, director of the Keough-Naughton Institute for Irish Studies and professor of English, received funding for an interdisciplinary conference titled "Race, Immigration, and Cultural Diversity in Ireland," planned for October 14–17, 2007 at the University of Notre Dame.

ISABEL FERREIRA GOULD, assistant professor of Portuguese and Brazilian studies and director of the Portuguese Language Program, received travel funding to participate in an international conference on female slavery, orphanages, and poverty in Portugal in November 2006. She also received a grant to fund a conference, "Africa in Portuguese, the Portuguese in Africa," scheduled for April 18–19, 2008.

ANDREW GOULD, associate professor of political science, was funded for a project titled "Political Attitudes of Muslims in Catholic Europe."

REV. DANIEL GROODY, CSC, assistant professor of theology and the director of the Center for Latino Spirituality and Culture at the Institute for Latino Studies, was awarded a grant to research issues in contemporary migration.

BEN HELLER, associate professor of romance languages and literatures, received funding for the Hispanic Caribbean Lecture Series held in fall 2006. He also received a grant to organize a conference on "Spanish-American Poetry in the Age of Globalization: Opening Channels North and South," scheduled for April 10–12, 2008.

DEBRA JAVELINE, assistant professor of political science, was awarded research funding to gather survey data from the victims of the 2004 siege on the Russian school in Beslan, North Ossetia.

REV. PAUL KOLLMAN, CSC, assistant professor of theology, received a 2007–08 academic year research grant for his project "The Missionary Role in the Emergence of the Catholic Church in Eastern Africa." He also received funding for the Africa Working Group.

SABINE MacCORMACK, the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, CSC, Professor of Arts and Letters and professor of history and classics, received a grant to organize the "International Colloquium on the Advancement of Knowledge and Religious Identity," October 4–5, 2007.

AARON MAGNAN-PARK, assistant professor of film, television, and theatre, received funding for the October visit of Korean director Yoon Jong-Bin and the screening of his film on the relationship of the military to civilian society.

ANTHONY MESSINA, associate professor of political science, received a faculty research grant for spring 2008 for the project "Migration to Europe in an Age of Terror." Messina and associate professor of political science ANDREW GOULD also received travel funding for an international conference in London entitled "Between Integration and Fragmentation: Conflicting Identities and Nationalisms within the New Europe," scheduled for October 17–18, 2007.

JONATHAN NOBLE, visiting assistant professor in the Department of East Asian Languages and Literature, received a grant for the 2007 Asian Film Festival and Conference held at Notre Dame April 19–21.

REV. ROBERT PELTON, CSC, director of Latin American/ North American Church Concerns (LANACC), received travel funding to the Fifth General Conference of the Latin American and Caribbean Bishops (CELAM), held in Brazil in May 2007.

GERARD POWERS, director of policy studies at the Kroc Institute, was awarded conference funding for a Catholic peacebuilding conference held in Bogota, Colombia, June 24–30, 2007.

KAREN RICHMAN, director of Border and Inter-American Affairs at the Institute for Latino Studies, was awarded a travel grant to attend the conference "Argentina 2007: Body Politics in the Americas: Formations of Race, Class, and Gender," held June 8–16, 2007 in Buenos Aires.

Visiting Fellowship Program

The Visiting Fellowship Program has helped the Kellogg Institute achieve its US and international reputation. Over the years, it has been one of the most visible, competitive, and prestigious programs of its kind in the United States. Since 1983, this program has brought numerous benefits to Kellogg and the University of Notre Dame.

First, the Visiting Fellowship Program attracts outstanding scholars from around the world. This community of scholars energizes the intellectual community at the Institute.

Second, some distinguished visiting faculty teach undergraduate and graduate courses. Students have the opportunity to learn firsthand from influential policy makers such as LUIS COSENZA (academic year 2006–07). Cosenza shared with students his vast experience tackling issues such as international debt relief, poverty reduction, economic development, and crime.

Finally, the Visiting Fellowship Program has been an important means through which Kellogg has reached policy circles. Many former visiting fellows have held prominent positions, especially in Latin America.

Among our fellows in 2006–07, DIEGO ABENTE was a senator and minister in Paraguay; LUIS COSENZA has served as a minister in Honduras and as executive director for Central America at the Inter-American Development Bank; and IRENE RIZZINI has been a leading advocate for children's issues in Brazil.

The Guest Scholars Program

The Guest Scholars Program brings to Notre Dame externally funded visiting faculty or scholars from other institutions to conduct their own independent research. Guest scholars become members of our intellectual community; participate in most of the Institute's events, seminars, lectures, and other academic activities; and contribute to the academic diversity of the University. Although this program carries no financial assistance, the Institute provides support services that help visitors advance their scholarly interests.

Kellogg Funds New Faculty Positions

The Institute has expanded its efforts to increase the number of faculty in key departments who work on Kellogg's core thematic and regional strengths. In the spring of 2006 the Faculty Committee approved a new initiative for Kellogg to pay for new faculty positions in strategic departments and subspecialties.

In the fall, the Institute began this initiative in collaboration with the Dean of Arts and Letters and the History Department. History was scheduled to search for a new Latin Americanist; Kellogg's support made it possible to search for two. As a result, the department hired KAREN GRAUBART (coming from Cornell as an associate professor), who works on the colonial Andean and Atlantic worlds, and JAIME PENSADO, a new PhD from the University of Chicago, who works on youth culture and student politics in twentieth-century Mexico. Graubart began her new position in fall 2007 and Pensado will begin his appointment in fall 2008. Kellogg's support has doubled the size of History's Latin American faculty and added substantially to the future potential of its new PhD program.

Subsequently, Kellogg made similar arrangements with the dean and the Department of Economics and Econometrics. In this case, if Economics hires one new professor in the field of economic growth and development, Kellogg will pay 50 percent of the salary of a second and third position in this subfield. In both the history and economics cases, Kellogg will fund the positions only as long as the departments maintain four Latin Americanists (in History) or three growth and development specialists (in Economics).

Kellogg plans to continue this approach in order to increase the number of Arts and Letters faculty who work on Kellogg themes. Dean of the College MARK ROCHE notes that "these appointments provide a model for how we can collaborate and strengthen both units within the University, and they serve as a particularly interesting example of what we can do together."

Regional Workshops on Latin America

The Kellogg Institute held the fourth annual Midwest Regional Workshops on Latin America on May 15, 2007. Gathering scholars from across the Midwest, the workshops gave faculty members and PhD candidates in political science, anthropology, history, and romance languages the opportunity to present and discuss their latest research with other Latin Americanists in the region.

Field-specific workshops focused on history and political science while an interdisciplinary workshop explored the theme of "Haitian States"—literary and magical as well as political-economic. Open to the public, the workshops reflected the Institute's ongoing efforts to support scholarly entrepreneurship and to encourage communication among individuals and institutions.

Workshops organizers included Institute Director SCOTT MAINWARING (political science), Faculty Fellow KAREN RICHMAN (Haiti), and Faculty Fellow SABINE MacCORMACK and Rocio Quispe-Agnoli of Michigan State University (history).

Africa

The Africa Working Group, cochaired by Faculty Fellows REV. PAUL KOLLMAN, CSC, and EMILY OSBORN, provides a forum for faculty, graduate students, and outside scholars to present and discuss cutting-edge research on Africa, as well as sponsoring Africanist events. From a range of disciplines, participants share a common interest in investigating Africa's past, present, and future, as well as Africa's place in the larger global order.

During the academic year, the group brought six distinguished speakers to campus, beginning with Ugandan physician Dr. Miriam Laker Opwonya, coordinator of clinical trials for ARV-HIV/AIDS therapy at Makerere University Infectious Disease Institute. Others included Bishop Paride Taban of Southern Sudan, speaking on faith and postwar peacebuilding; Neil Roos of South Africa, reporting on his research on white South African World War II servicemen and their perspectives on apartheid; and presentations on water technologies in Guinea, marine park management in Kenya, and Maasai women's issues.

In October, the working group collaborated on a conference on "Africa's Children: Peril and Promise," dealing with the challenges faced by Africa's children, including human trafficking, living on the streets, and HIV. It closed out the year with an event commemorating the 13th anniversary of the 1994 Rwandan Genocide: "A Journey of Rwandan Genocide Survivors: Seeds of Hope and Peace."

Haiti

The Haiti Working Group, chaired by Faculty Fellow REV. TOM STREIT, CSC, is a collaborative effort of the Department of Biology, home of Notre Dame's Haiti Program, and the Kellogg Institute. In an interdisciplinary approach, participants aim to inspire interest in and discussion about public health issues in Haiti, with a focus on how the effects of political turmoil and civil unrest disrupt the nation's efforts to improve its citizens' health.

In April, the group cosponsored an interdisciplinary conference in conjunction with the Institute for Latino Studies: "Transnationalism, Translation, Transnation: A Dialogue on the Americas." It featured a distinguished group of scholars, including José David Saldívar, Kirsten Silva Gruesz, Aldon L. Nielsen, J. Michael Dash, and Anna Brickhouse, as well as Notre Dame faculty members.

In other partnerships, the Haiti Working Group lent support to the University's Millennium Development Initiative. It also explored the possibility of a relationship between the Haiti Program and the Alliance for Catholic Education (ACE) Program. ACE is a teacher training program based in Notre Dame's Institute for Educational Initiatives (IEI), which is directed by Faculty Fellow REV. TIMOTHY SCULLY, CSC.

New Working Group—Migrants' Transnational Civic Engagement and Political Participation

A new working group, "Migrants' Transnational Civic Engagement and Political Participation," was formed in February to investigate the complex structures, causes, and consequences of transnational civic and political involvement.

The new working group grew out of the shared interests of Faculty Fellows JORGE BUSTAMANTE, the Eugene and Helen Conley Professor of Sociology, and KAREN RICHMAN, director of Border and Inter-American Affairs at the Institute for Latino Studies.

Among the research questions being addressed by the working group are migrants' transborder political autonomy and political practices, and how migrants' civic binationality may affect democratization in their societies of origin.

Richman's February lecture "'Call Us Vote People': Transnational Political Yearnings of Haitian and Mexican Immigrants" was the inaugural activity of the group. MAURIZIO ALBAHARI, an Erasmus Institute fellow and working group member, closed out the year with a lecture on "Europe and the Transnational Regulation of Migration."

Seminar and Lecture Series

The Kellogg Institute's weekly Seminar and Lecture Series brings speakers from across academic disciplines to explore ideas relevant to Kellogg's research priorities and to expose social science faculty to the latest research initiatives. Although some speakers are faculty fellows, visiting fellows, or guest scholars, the lecture series also features prominent scholars from beyond Notre Dame.

The Notre Dame Press published three books in the Kellogg Institute series in 2006–07.

Faculty Fellow GUILLERMO O'DONNELL's new collection of essays, Dissonances (2007), is the latest in the Helen Kellogg Series of monographs by Notre Dame Press.

This book brings together a collection of significant recent essays in which O'Donnell considers both the method for and substance of critiques of democracies. While progress has been made in democratization, the authoritarian legacy hangs over that advancement. O'Donnell engages in his analysis while keeping a firm gaze on that dangerous past.

The essays in this volume develop many of the ideas presented in his earlier collection, Counterpoints: Selected Essays on Authoritarianism and Democracy.

For many years, O'Donnell has explored the various ways in which the democracies of Latin America—many of them new—failed to meet expectations held out for them by citizens, analysts, and political actors.

"The articles collected here represent some of the very best thinking by an author who remains one of the most creative and insightful political theorists, whose work is deeply grounded in empirical observation, whose ideas are consistently robust, and whose reflections can be both provocative and of great practical use," notes Charles D. Kenney, associate professor in the Political Science Department at the University of Oklahoma.

Looking Forward: Comparative Perspectives on Cuba's Transition (Notre Dame Press, 2007) imagines Cuba's future after the Castro Regime, and considers the scenarios and possible consequences of change.

Edited by former Visiting Fellow MARIFELI PÉREZ-STABLE, this new volume for the Helen Kellogg book series grew out of a Kellogg conference, "Cuba's Democratic Transition," and also features the work of 2004 Visiting Fellow MALA HTUN.

Each chapter—prepared by an expert in the field—takes up a basic issue: politics, the military, the legal system, civil society, gender, race, economic transition strategies, social policy and social welfare, corruption, the diaspora, memory, ideology and culture, and US-Cuba relations.

Pérez-Stable is professor of sociology and anthropology at Florida International University and vice president for democratic governance at the Inter-American Dialogue. She is the author and editor of a number of books, including The Cuban Revolution: Origins, Course, and Legacy (Oxford, 1993).

In 2001, the Kellogg Institute launched a multi-year initiative funded by the Ford Foundation with the Colombian Commission of Jurists and the Inter-American Dialogue designed to advance research on the long-running conflict in Colombia.

Some of the research that emerged from these efforts has been gathered in a new volume in the Institute's book series, Peace, Democracy, and Human Rights in Colombia (Notre Dame Press, 2007).

Edited by CHRISTOPHER WELNA, Kellogg's former executive director, and GUSTAVO

GALLÓN, director of the Colombian Commission of Jurists and a visiting fellow in 1998–99, the book explores why Colombia's internal war became so entrenched and why peace efforts have failed to produce durable agreements. Peace, Democracy, and Human Rights in Colombia also examines Colombia's attempts at negotiating peace, the weakening of its political institutions, the politics of human rights, and the impact of US policy on drug trafficking.

Contributors include three former visiting fellows from Colombia: ALVARO CAMACHO, EDUARDO PIZARRO, and ANA MARÍA BEJARANO.

"(The authors) provide a critical path to understanding Colombia's core political challenges, and in so doing they lay the groundwork for an eventual resolution to Latin America's costliest struggle for democracy," notes ANTHONY DEPALMA, correspondent for the New York Times and a 2003 visiting fellow at Kellogg.

Thirteen new titles have appeared in the Kellogg Institute Working Paper Series edited by Faculty Fellow Robert Fishman. The series promotes the quick dissemination, free of charge, of research by current and past faculty fellows, visiting fellows, and guest scholars. Published during the academic year 2006–07:

His article “Caudillismo, democracia, y la excepcionalidad chilena en América Hispana” appeared in Revista de Occidente 305 (October 2006).

Education

Undergraduate Programs

Kellogg's undergraduate programs provide students with hands-on experiences and opportunities for scholarship that can have a major influence on their academic careers and postgraduate choices. Known as a leader in providing innovative educational opportunities for undergraduates, the Kellogg Institute saw an increase in applications for virtually all of its undergraduate programs in 2006–07.

Kellogg programs give undergraduate participants a focal point for further study and scholarship, allowing them to sharpen the passion for international study gained overseas. Over 45 undergraduates went abroad through Kellogg programs in 2006–07. Their experiences translated into clearly defined academic goals, informed research, and original theses and senior projects.

Students' participation in Kellogg programs had a life-changing impact on many who graduated in 2007. Several chose to return to the countries where they had pursued internships or research to participate in service work. Others continued their study of Latin America by pursuing master's degrees or PhDs. Still others, who had conducted research or internships in the medical field, went on to medical school. The experience students gain through Kellogg programs reaches far beyond their four years at Notre Dame. These programs significantly influence students' long-term goals and aspirations and inform—and even determine—their future careers.

The Institute's educational programs served 133 undergraduates in 2006–07. The Institute reached hundreds more undergraduates through academic and cultural events and cosponsorship of student activities on campus. In addition, grants allowed curricular enhancements and programmatic innovation, such as the expansion of the Experiencing Latin America Fellowship Program to Asia and Africa. The Institute provided $231,223 in grants and internships to undergraduates in 2006–07.

Mary Ellen Vales

Internship Program

Demand for Kellogg's Internship Program, one of the Institute's most popular offerings, increases every year. The number of students applying for summer internships in 2006–07 was twice that of 2005–06. With generous support from The Coca-Cola Foundation and our Advisory Board, we funded a record number of undergraduate internships: 35 students in Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the United States.

The Internship Program strives to prepare students for future scholarship, citizenship, and work in a global society. As participation in the program increases, we continue to maintain its high quality. We place students with organizations that match their interests in projects tailored to their specific skills.

Our internships provide students with a framework to explore the developing world, improve their language skills, and understand policy issues and the social challenges of the countries where they are interning. A number of 2005–06 internship recipients who graduated in 2007 returned to their internship host countries—Uganda, Peru, and Mexico, among others—to engage in service work. Another is beginning her career at the Center for Arms Control and Nonproliferation in Washington, DC. Still others carry their experiences with them into the work world or into respected medical, law, and graduate school programs.

As the 2006–07 year came to a close, we expanded the program to include new internship sites in Ghana and India, bringing the total number of countries in the program to 13.

2007 ISP graduates with Fr. Hesburgh

Latin American Studies Program (LASP)

The Latin American Studies Program, which the Kellogg Institute administers, promotes opportunities for Notre Dame students to deepen their understanding of the region through courses, campus activities, internships, and overseas learning.

In 2006–07, 61 students were enrolled in the program. Fifteen students graduated with the LASP minor in 2007, with double that number scheduled to graduate with a minor in Latin American Studies in 2008.

International Scholars Program (ISP)

The International Scholars Program identifies students of outstanding potential early in their Notre Dame education and recruits them into challenging academic enrichment opportunities. At the end of their first year, students are paired with faculty fellows and serve as research assistants on fellows' projects.

In 2006, 11 sophomores entered the ISP, the largest number in the program's history. Majoring in Arabic, architecture, political science, economics, and peace studies among other fields, they joined 11 juniors and seniors in the International Scholars Program. Twelve Kellogg faculty fellows served as advisers to ISP participants.

May of 2007 marked the second time in the program's four-year history that an International Scholar was selected as valedictorian of the graduating class. Michael Rossmann, an economics and theology major, followed in the footsteps of Enrique Schaerer '05 in receiving this distinction.

Kellogg/Kroc Undergraduate Research Grants

In the second year of a new partnership with the Joan B. Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies, the Kellogg Institute awarded nine research grants to undergraduates for the summer of 2007. These grants enable exceptional students to carry out primary research in a variety of fields. As a result of their research, students are able to complete strong senior projects or theses. Many have received awards and grants based on their work. In 2007, two 2005–06 grant recipients received awards for senior theses based on their Kellogg-funded research. Rachel Meeks received the Best Senior Thesis Award from the History Department and Kristina Leszczak was corecipient of the John J. Kennedy Prize for Best Essay on Latin America.

Experiencing Africa, Asia, and Latin America Fellowships

In 2007, the Institute's Experiencing Latin America Fellowships were expanded to allow freshmen and sophomores to travel to Africa and Asia as well as Latin America.

The program now offers students the opportunity to engage in initial exploratory projects in Africa, Asia, and Latin America. These fellowships fund exceptionally qualified and committed undergraduates who undertake innovative projects in those regions. Projects may include research, nonprofit work, study, or other activities that will increase the students' commitment to and knowledge of the regions. Six students were funded through the program this year.

Participating students engaged in a variety of projects. Stephanie Fairhurst accompanied Vania Smith-Oka, assistant professor of anthropology, to Mexico to assist in her research on the integration of traditional medicine and biomedicine. Sophomore Billy Thanhouser took advantage of the new opportunity to go to Asia to work with and teach monks in Nepal. Finance major Nicolas Perez returned to his home country of Ecuador to study the flower industry, which has become a significant source of income for Ecuador in recent years.

Considine Award

Matthew Hughes '07 was the recipient of the annual Considine Award, bestowed by the Latin American Studies Program and the Kellogg Institute during commencement activities in the spring. Funded by the US Conference of Catholic Bishops and comprising a certificate and a $500 cash prize, the award was established in 2002–03 to commemorate the late Rev. John Considine, a Maryknoll Missioner who made pioneering contributions to the building of strong ties between the US Catholic Church and the Catholic Church in Latin America. The award recognizes a student whose activities and studies reflect Rev. Considine's aspirations and lifework.

Kennedy Prize for Best Senior Essay on Latin America

Each year the Latin American Studies Program and the Kellogg Institute award the John. J. Kennedy Prize for the best senior essay on Latin America. The award is named after a Notre Dame political science professor who did much to develop Latin American studies on this campus. It carries a monetary value of $300 and recognizes the recipient's high-quality work at Notre Dame. Winners are recognized in the graduate program and during Senior Week ceremonies.

Two students were named as recipients of the award this year: Jon Bischof and Kristina Leszczak. Bischof, who also received a Kellogg internship, was awarded a National Science Foundation Graduate Research Fellowship to attend Harvard University this fall. Leszczak—an International Scholar, Kellogg grant recipient, and Latin American Studies Program minor—will be attending Cambridge University to pursue a master's degree in Latin American studies.

Monteiro Prize for Best Essay Written in Portuguese

Each year the Program in Portuguese and Brazilian Studies and the Kellogg Institute award the George Monteiro Prize for the best two essays written in Portuguese by undergraduate students on a subject related to the Lusophone world. Papers must have been submitted as a requirement to one of the courses offered by the Department of Romance Languages and Literatures. Each award carries a monetary value of $500 and the recipients are recognized at the Kellogg Senior Awards Reception and at the Department of Romance Languages and Literatures reception during Commencement week.

The award is funded by a grant from the Fundação Luso-Americana Para o Desenvolvimento (FLAD).

International Career Workshop

Spring 2007 marked the second annual International Career Workshop held by the Kellogg Institute. Over 175 undergraduate and graduate students attended the event on a Saturday to learn more about career opportunities available to students pursuing international and language studies. Faculty, staff, and community members gave a variety of presentations to inform students about international career possibilities as well as how to prepare for those careers. The event was cosponsored by nine academic units, including the College of Arts and Letters.

Quechua Language Study Fellowships

For the second year, the Kellogg Institute offered fellowships to both undergraduate and graduate students to pursue the study of Quechua at the Colegio Andino de Postgrado at the Centro de Estudios Regionales in Cuzco, Peru. Sabine MacCormack, faculty fellow and professor of history and classics, served as program mentor. We awarded one undergraduate fellowship in 2006–07.

North American Exchange Mobility, Society, and Governance in North America

In 2006 the Kellogg Institute received a $200,000 grant from the US Department of Education's Fund for the Improvement of Post Secondary Education (FIPSE) to support the creation of a new student exchange program. The program, entitled "Mobility, Society, and Governance in North America," fosters the exchange of students in the social sciences and the humanities between six universities in the US, Mexico, and Canada.

Facilitated by the Kellogg Institute, the University of Notre Dame is joining Harvard University, Université de Montréal, University of British Columbia, El Colegio de México, and Universidad de las Américas Puebla in a consortium of higher learning aimed at creating a group of young professionals and researchers with a comparative and transnational vision of the processes characterizing the NAFTA region—a vision that the consortium hopes will inspire innovative solutions to North American challenges.

The first year of the program, 2006–07, served as a planning year; exchanges between institutions will begin in 2007–2008. Participants will include advanced (junior and senior) undergraduates and postgraduate students. Faculty Fellow and Interim Director TED BEATTY and Associate Director SHARON SHIERLING serve as Notre Dame's codirectors for the program.

Graduate Education

Since the 1980s, the Kellogg Institute has made graduate education an important part of its mission. We enhance Notre Dame's visibility in international studies, attract leading faculty who work closely with students, bring in external grants that have supported graduate education, recruit excellent students, and provide resources for graduate students to make studying at Notre Dame more attractive. The Institute provided $179,870 in support of graduate education in 2006–07.

Dissertation Year Fellowships

In 2006–07, the Kellogg Institute awarded four Dissertation Year Fellowships in International Studies to advanced Notre Dame PhD students to enable them to write their dissertations.

Supplemental PhD Fellowships

For students who began their PhDs between 2000 and 2005, the Kellogg Institute with the support of The Coca-Cola Foundation provided a $5,000 supplemental PhD fellowship for each of five years above and beyond the stipend offered by our Graduate School.

In 2006, the Kellogg Institute assumed responsibility for funding this innovative and successful program, awarding one new PhD fellowship. With the support of two members of the Advisory Board, RYAN KERRIGAN and MARK MCGRATH, four additional five-year fellowships have been funded to begin in the 2007–08 academic year.

The Kellogg Faculty Committee voted this year to expand the Supplemental PhD Fellowship Program to all outstanding students in international studies. These fellowships encourage students to choose Notre Dame for their doctoral study. The past awards helped Notre Dame attract superb graduate students from Latin America. In 2006–07, these supplemental PhD fellowships funded 16 Notre Dame PhD students.

Catholic Mission and Public Outreach

Catholic Intellectual Life

The Catholic mission of the University of Notre Dame informs the Kellogg Institute's comparative international research and teaching. At the same time, the Institute's activities contribute to the Catholic mission of the University of Notre Dame.

The University's mission is embedded in the normative concerns of Kellogg's five core themes: democratization and the quality of democracy, economic growth and development, public policies for social justice, religion and society, and social movements and organized civil society. The social teachings of the Church and the Catholic mission of the University frequently resonate in the research of individual scholars. This mission is expressed in the work of many public figures and scholars who visit the Institute to lecture and to debate with our fellows and students. It is also expressed in the Institute's efforts through its public outreach programs to raise public awareness and understanding of democracy, development, social justice, and other contemporary public issues that embody the values reflected in Catholic social thought.

By extending the work of the Institute outside its usual academic sphere, the Institute attempts to draw a broad audience into the debate about important international problems facing humanity. Its attention to Catholic intellectual life and contemporary public issues complements the scholarly research for which Kellogg is known.

LANACC

With a home at the Kellogg Institute, Latin American/ North American Church Concerns (LANACC) focuses on one of Kellogg's principal research themes, the role of religion in society. Faculty Fellow REV. ROBERT PELTON, CSC, the founder and director of LANACC, seeks to interpret Latin American Catholicism to US Catholics through films, public events, and publications.

Romero's Legacy

Each year since Archbishop Romero's assassination in 1980, LANACC has led a community-wide commemoration of the Salvadoran churchman's life and work. During the 27th annual "Romero Days" at Notre Dame, DR. VICTORIA MARINA VELÁSQUEZ DE AVILÉS, First Magistrate of the Supreme Court in El Salvador, traced her country's efforts to institutionalize the defense of human rights and end impunity directly to Romero.

In her March 29 lecture, Velásquez de Avilés called the archbishop the greatest advocate for human rights in El Salvador. Noting that Archbishop Romero sacrificed his life as an offering to justice and a tribute to nonviolence, she called on the audience to respect this sacrifice by bringing Romero's dream of a more just world to fruition.

Dr. Victoria Marina Velásquez De Avilés

Catholic Peacebuilding Network Meets in Colombia

Church leaders, scholars, and peacebuilding practitioners from around the world gathered in June 2007 in Bogotá, Colombia, for the fourth annual Catholic Peacebuilding Network Conference, with support from the Kellogg Institute.

The conference provided a forum for participants to focus on solutions for achieving peace in a country torn apart during nearly four decades of armed conflict. Colombia faces the western hemisphere's most serious humanitarian crisis, with 4,500 civilians dying every year in the violence.

The Catholic Peacebuilding Network (CPN) was formed in 2004 by Notre Dame's Kroc Institute and Catholic Relief Services, with the active involvement of the Office of International Justice and Peace of the US Conference of Catholic Bishops and Maryknoll, among other partners.

"The aim is to create a sense of human solidarity and concern for the common good that will bear fruit as learning becomes service to justice."

—University of Notre Dame Mission Statement

Mack Delivers Notre Dame Prize Lecture

HELEN MACK CHANG, the 2005 recipient of the Notre Dame Prize for Distinguished Public Service in Latin America and founder of the Myrna Mack Foundation, spoke on “La muerte es vida” (Death is life) in her October 31 lecture at Notre Dame.

Mack recounted her fight to bring members of the Guatemalan military to justice for thousands of political killings, including the assassination of her sister, the anthropologist Myrna Mack, and her ongoing efforts to end the culture of impunity in Guatemala.

“The political and economic powers use [the country’s] institutions to attack, control, and to enrich themselves,” said Mack in her assessment of the current political environment. “The situation has not changed much although the motivations are different.”

Established in 2000 by the Kellogg Institute and funded by The Coca-Cola Foundation, the Notre Dame Prize has been awarded to some of the leading political, civil, and religious figures in Latin America.

Notre Dame Millennium Development Initiative

Kellogg Institute Faculty Fellow REV. ROBERT DOWD, CSC, assistant professor of political science, is the director of the Notre Dame Millennium Development Initiative (MDI), which seeks to contribute to the fight against extreme poverty, especially in sub-Saharan Africa.

Adopted by world leaders during the United Nations Millennium Summit in 2000, the Millennium Development Goals (MDG) focus on combating poverty, hunger, disease, illiteracy, environmental degradation, and discrimination against women. The MDI has partnered with the Millennium Villages Project, the UN’s flagship initiative aimed at achieving these goals.

The MDI is initially focusing efforts in Uganda, where the University has strong ties through the Congregation of Holy Cross. The Kellogg Institute has sent students to Uganda for research and internships over the past several years, and the MDI will build on that model of research, service, and exchange in Ruhiiira and Nindye, its two project sites.

Dowd, a specialist in East Africa, used the first year of MDI to assemble a guiding task force of faculty, staff, students, and alumni; to inform the Notre Dame community about the project; and to build ties in Uganda.

In January, he led a delegation to Uganda that included University President REV. JOHN JENKINS, CSC. In March, Kellogg cosponsored a visit to Notre Dame by Dr. Johnson Nkuuhe, the Uganda country coordinator of the Millennium Villages Project (MVP), and Dr. David Siriri, MVP’s science coordinator at Ruhiiira, to explore ways that Notre Dame students and faculty might most effectively contribute to promoting human well-being in Ruhiiira and beyond.

Dowd sees this project as an opportunity to contribute to human development—and an opportunity to study the development process from the bottom up. A new partnership with Uganda Martyrs University (UMU) will allow Notre Dame to take advantage of the Catholic university’s expertise in complementary fields such as agriculture, development and ethics, education, and microfinance, and utilize its extensive experience with development projects in nearby villages.

Confronting the Creation of Wealth

On April 23–24, the Kellogg Institute cosponsored an interfaith conference on “Muslim, Christian, and Jewish Views on the Creation of Wealth” that drew academic, business, banking, and religious leaders together to discuss whether business values can coexist with religious teachings.

Held at Notre Dame in collaboration with the Mendoza College of Business; the departments of Economic and Policy Studies, Theology, and Philosophy; and the Erasmus and Kroc institutes, the conference explored the major challenges to faith in the global economy.

Participants included four Kellogg faculty fellows: GEORGES ENDERLE, conference organizer and the John T. Ryan Jr. Professor of Business Ethics; LEE TAVIS, C. R. Smith Professor of Business Administration; R. SCOTT APPLEBY, John M. Regan Jr. Director of the Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies and professor of history; and AMITAVA K. DUTT, professor of economics and policy studies.

Enderle noted that discussions of corporate social responsibility had raised expectations about how corporations handle social and environmental matters. “We hope to develop insights about how corporations can and should create genuine wealth,” he said.

Holy Cross Fathers at Kellogg

The Kellogg Institute has long welcomed the leadership and participation of members of the Congregation of Holy Cross in its scholarly endeavors. In 2006–07, eight Kellogg faculty fellows were members of the order, in fields ranging from biology to economics to theology.

REV. ERNEST BARTELL, CSC, Professor Emeritus of Economics (PhD, Princeton University, 1966)

REV. ROBERT DOWD, CSC, Assistant Professor of Political Science; Director, Notre Dame Millennium Development Initiative (PhD, University of California at Los Angeles, 2003)

REV. PATRICK D. GAFFNEY, CSC, Associate Professor of Anthropology (PhD, University of Chicago, 1982)

REV. PAUL V. KOLLMAN, CSC, Assistant Professor of Theology (PhD, The Divinity School, University of Chicago, 2001)

Fellows in Policy & Public Service

SAMUEL AMAGO was nominated to the executive committee of the Program for Cultural Cooperation between Spain's Ministry of Culture and United States Universities.

JEFFREY H. BERGSTRAND gave the invited lecture "Regional and Inter-Regional Trade Agreements: Examining Their Role for the Middle East" at the conference "Globalization in the 21st Century," at the Emirates Center for Strategic Studies and Research, Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates, in April 2007.

MICHAEL COPPEDGE participated in the workshop "Revising the Index of Electoral Democracy," sponsored by the Program for the Development of Democracy in Latin America, United Nations Development Program, which took place in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic in March. He also served as a member of an expert group convened by John Gerring of Boston University to advise the National Academy of Sciences and USAID on improving indicators of democracy and governance.

ALEXANDRA GUISENGER spoke on trade policy and health services at the "Global Government Health Partners Forum 2006," a biennial meeting of the world's chief nursing officers (CNOs) and chief medical officers (CMOs), held at the Lillian Carter Center for International Nursing at Emory University in November.

FRANCES HAGOPIAN completed a two-year term on the nominations committee of the American Political Science Association, and is chairing the APSA Democratization Section's award committee for the best book on democratization.

TIN-BOR VICTORIA HUI served as a reviewer for the Reagan-Fascell Democracy Fellows Program of the National Endowment for Democracy. In addition, she joined the Academic Advisors Committee of the International Center on Nonviolent Conflict.

KWAN S. KIM was reelected to serve on the Advisory Board of the North American Economics and Finance Association for 2007–09.

SEMION LYANDRES was appointed to the Board of Trustees of the SPHERE Institute, a not-for-profit applied policy firm that conducts public policy research evaluating education, health, and social service programs supported by public and private funds.

A. JAMES MCADAMS served as the academic expert on "administrative vetting" at an April meeting in Amman, Jordan with 18 parliamentary members of the Iraqi deBa'athification Commission.

MARY ELLEN O'CONNELL advised the National Religious Campaign Against Torture on the Military Commissions Act of 2006 as it made its way through Congress following the June decision by the Supreme Court that the military commissions set up by the Bush administration to try detainees at Guantanamo Bay violated the Geneva Conventions. "Proportionality and Sustainable Peace in the Middle East," her Kroc Institute Policy Brief (No. 12, August, 2006), was disseminated widely to Congress, the Washington diplomatic corps, and the NGO community.

REV. ROBERT PELTON, CSC, received the Sagamore of the Wabash Award, the highest honor bestowed by the Governor of Indiana. It is a personal tribute given to those who have rendered a distinguished service to the state or to the governor.

KAREN RICHMAN reported on "The Impacts of Emigration on Development" in July in Bellagio, Italy as part of a month-long Bellagio Dialogue on Migration, a project of the German Marshall Fund, with support from the Rockefeller Foundation, which is designed to advance and enrich the ongoing debate about migration in the United States and Europe.

LYN SPILLMAN was named the chair-elect of the American Sociological Association Section on the Sociology of Culture in 2006.

J. SAMUEL VALENZUELA was named in 2006 to the International Advisory Board of Política: Revista de Ciencias Políticas. Valenzuela also took part in a May 2007 World Bank meeting on political and economic development that used as its focal point a new manuscript by Nobel Prize-winning economist Douglass North, John Wallis, and Barry Weingast.

US-Mexico Training, Internship, Exchanges and Scholarships (TIES)

In a three-year project, the Kellogg Institute has collaborated with the Mendoza College of Business at Notre Dame and the Universidad de Guadalajara (UG) to build teaching and research in entrepreneurship at the Mexican university. The project addresses an economic development challenge: the plight of small agricultural producers in the region who have been hard hit by NAFTA. TIES aims to give farmers the entrepreneurial skills they need to enter global markets.

The TIES project is funded by the US Agency for International Development (USAID). It enables faculty from UG to spend time at the Kellogg Institute, and Notre Dame faculty to teach modules to MBA students in Guadalajara.

TIES also facilitates Notre Dame MBA students and undergraduate students sponsored by the Kellogg Institute to join their Mexican counterparts in summer internships to develop business plans and provide consulting services to small and medium-sized agricultural producers in Jalisco and Michoacán.

The Notre Dame–Universidad de Guadalajara TIES project is co-directed by ADRIAN DE LEON-ARIAS (PhD, University of Notre Dame), Dean of the Business School at Universidad de Guadalajara, Kellogg Faculty Fellow JUAN RIVERA, and Kellogg Associate Director SHARON SCHIERLING.

“Safeguarding America: National Security in the 21st Century”

September 14—TIMOTHY J. ROEMER, former US Congressman for Indiana’s Third District who served on the National Commission on Terrorist Attacks upon the United States (known as the 9/11 Commission), returned to Notre Dame for the lecture “Safeguarding America: National Security in the 21st Century,” sponsored by the Kellogg Institute. Roemer, who earned master’s and doctoral degrees from Notre Dame, currently serves as president of the Center for National Policy and is a distinguished scholar at George Mason University’s Mercatus Center, a nonprofit research and educational institution dedicated to improving public policy outcomes. He spoke to a large audience on his efforts to promote national security for all Americans.

“New Democracies, Poverty and Governance”

October 9—RICARDO MADURO JOEST, former president of Honduras (2003–06) and member of the Kellogg Advisory Board, spoke on the challenges of Latin American presidencies in his lecture “New Democracies, Poverty and Governance.” He discussed his administration’s institutional reforms, helping to create a universal school lunch program, for example, and promoting legislative changes that opened the political parties and strengthened the rule of law in Honduras.

“Apartheid, Robben Island and Nelson Mandela: The Eddie Daniels Story”

October 24—In his lecture to the Notre Dame and South Bend community, South African anti-apartheid activist Eddie Daniels told the story of his fifteen years of imprisonment on Robben Island, three of which were spent with Nelson Mandela.

A member of the largely nonviolent Liberal Party of South Africa, in 1961 he became one of the founders of the African Resistance Movement (ARM), which sought to disrupt the regime through attacks on nonhuman targets.

His activities led him to be jailed in 1964. While in prison, Daniels graduated from high school and received BA and BCom degrees from the University of South Africa. After his release and an additional five years of house arrest, Daniels was a teacher in Cape Town until his retirement in 1993.

His book, There and Back: Robben Island 1964–1979 (Mayibuye Books, 2002), describes his defiance of South Africa’s apartheid policy and the decade and a half of incarceration that followed.

DR-CAFTA

March 28—Norman García Paz, Honduran ambassador to the US and former Honduran minister of trade and industry (2002–05) and Alberto Trejos, Costa Rica’s former minister of foreign trade (2002–04) joined faculty fellows JEFFREY BERGSTRAND, professor of finance, and JAIME ROS, professor of economics and policy studies, in a Kellogg-sponsored roundtable to discuss the new Dominican Republic–Central America Free Trade Agreement (DR-CAFTA).

The two policymakers, who played key roles in negotiating agreements for their respective countries, discussed whether DR-CAFTA, which will create the second largest Latin American export market when fully implemented, can raise living standards for Central America.

Trejos, currently a professor at Instituto Centroamericano de Administración de Empresas (INCAE) in Costa Rica, pointed out that Costa Rica has yet to approve DR-CAFTA, largely due to political infighting. “This is one of the last opportunities to rethink whether export-led growth, foreign direct investment attraction, and openness to the world is the right strategy,” he said.

“A Progressive Agenda for Mexico”

April 10—Cuauhtémoc Cárdenas, a founder of Mexico’s Party of the Democratic Revolution (Partido de la Revolución Democrática, or PRD), three-time presidential candidate, and the first freely elected mayor of Mexico City, spoke on “A Progressive Agenda for Mexico” during his visit to the Kellogg Institute.

In the wake of Mexico’s divisive 2006 election, the prominent politician pledged to put aside his political biases in order to work for the betterment of his nation and petitioned other elected officials to do the same.

“Forget our differences and injured pride,” emphasized Cárdenas. “Our interests must now focus on Mexico’s future.”

“The Impact of Globalization on Islam and Democracy in Indonesia”

February 12—In his Kellogg Institute lecture, Amien Rais, the former speaker of Indonesia’s People’s Consultative Assembly, discussed his concerns about the future of democracy in the world’s third largest democracy.

Rais has been involved in Indonesia’s struggle for a sustainable democracy since his key role in the 1998 protest in Jakarta that forced the resignation of President Suharto and led to the establishment of the reformist National Mandate Party (Partai Amanat Nasional, or PAN). As speaker, Rais helped enact constitutional reforms that revived and amended Indonesia’s 1945 democratic constitution.

Kellogg Institute Foreign Film Series

The Kellogg Institute's popular International Film Series expanded its offerings beyond Latin America in 2006–07. Crossing the prime meridian was Nowhere in Africa. Each screening was preceded by a reception offering food characteristic of the country featured in the evening's film.

Orfeu:

Adapted from a play, Brazilian director Carlos Diegues's film is an interpretation of the Orpheus myth set in Rio de Janeiro's Carnaval. The film is also a serious and sometimes disturbing look at the racial prejudices and gang violence of Rio's slums. Introduction by SANDRA TEIXEIRA (Portuguese and Brazilian Studies) and MARIA ARENILLAS (PhD candidate, Literature Program).

Nowhere in Africa:

Caroline Link's award-winning film captures the extraordinary true tale of a Jewish family that flees the Nazi regime in 1938 for a remote farm in Kenya. Introduction by REV. PAUL KOLLMAN, CSC.

Milagros: Made in Mexico:

A documentary shot primarily in Mexico, Milagros: Made in Mexico offers a unique understanding of migration to the US through the perspective of women in Guanajuato, Mexico. It includes a closer look at cooperatives and microeconomic enterprises that allow the women to revive their birthplace and diminish the need to migrate. Introduction by Martina Guzman and Monique Velasquez, Producers, 4 Women In Film.

ContraCantos and Arabiando perform

Brazil Week

October 2–5, 2006: The Kellogg Institute hosted a week-long festival of Brazilian music, movies, and culture during its annual celebration of Brazil Week, cosponsored with the Ministry of Brazilian Culture. The events highlighted the cultural diversity of Brazil and its peoples.

In one event, IRENE RIZZINI, Visiting Chair in the Study of Brazilian Culture, introduced Favela Rising and facilitated a discussion about the 2005 film. Directed by Matt Mochary and Jeff Zimbalist, it documents the uprising of a favela (Brazilian squatter settlement) against oppressive teen drug armies and corrupt police.

ContraCantos and Arabiando

Choral ensemble ContraCantos and the band Arabiando captivated, entertained, and educated during their weeklong visit, which coincided with Kellogg's Brazil Week festivities and included performances on the Notre Dame campus and in the surrounding community, including an evening event at South Bend's Adams High School.

Arabiando

Return of a Capoeira Master

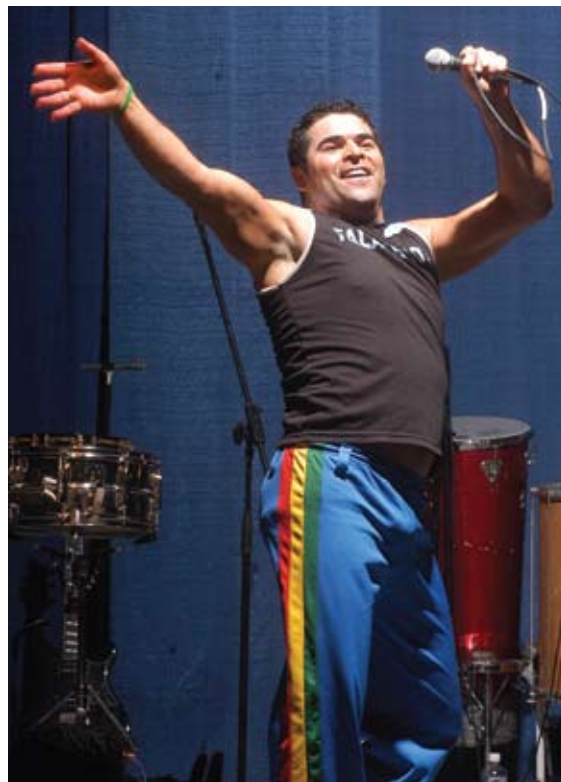

MAESTRE COBRA MANSA returned to the Kellogg Institute in March 2007 after heightening interest in the Brazilian martial art of capoeira during his 2005 stay as Visiting Chair in the Study of Brazilian Culture.

He was met by established capoeira clubs eager to continue study under one of the leading masters of Capoeira Angola. In addition to holding rodas, Mestre Cobra spoke to students in the University's Portuguese and music programs on topics related to capoeira and the Afro-Brazilian Movement in Brazil, and introduced children from area Boys and Girls Clubs to capoeira, its music, and its history.

Brazilian Carnaval

Bringing the rhythms of Brazil to Notre Dame's South Dining Hall, the Kellogg Institute's ninth annual Brazilian Carnaval heated up February in South Bend with dancing, fabulous costumes, and live samba music.

Outreach to Local Schools

In order to help internationalize K–12 curriculum in the area, Kellogg provides a variety of resources to local teachers through an innovative outreach program. In 2006–07, more teachers and students than ever before took advantage of Kellogg’s longstanding Traveling Trunks Program as well as its more recently added Teacher Discussion Groups. Over 2000 students learned about Latin America by delving into the Traveling Trunks, twice as many as last year. At least 50 teachers attended Teacher Discussion Groups to gain more knowledge of Latin America and to take that knowledge back to their students. Teachers learned about the availability of these resources through Kellogg’s expanded outreach Web pages.

Teacher Discussion Groups

The Institute held four Teacher Discussion Groups in 2006–07, reaching approximately 50 area teachers with programs on topics suggested by the teachers themselves. The discussion groups offer local K–12 educators the opportunity to gain knowledge about Latin America and learn about related resources available to them at the University. Discussion groups included a Latin dance session, cooking classes, a capoeira demonstration by visitor Cobra Mansa, and a discussion of Colombia’s political situation by a Colombian citizen living in the area. Elementary, middle-school, and high-school educators attended.

“Perspectives from Latin America” Newsletter

Unveiled last year to general acclaim, the “Perspectives from Latin America” newsletter allows K–12 students to read about the international experiences of Notre Dame students. At the same time, the newsletter offers Notre Dame undergraduates the opportunity to share their summer experiences in Latin America with an eager audience—local students. Teachers may access the newsletter through the outreach pages of the Kellogg Web site. Teachers may also invite Notre Dame students who write for the newsletter to speak to their classes.

Traveling Trunks of Latin America

In 2006–07 local teachers checked out Kellogg’s Traveling Trunks twice as many times as in the previous year. Since 2000, the Traveling Trunks Program has provided supplemental resources to teachers who wish to bring Latin America to life for their students. The program consists of six trunks, focusing on six different regions of Latin America. Individual trunks are available on a monthly basis and are used in classrooms and international fairs in northern Indiana. With its hands-on approach, the Traveling Trunks Program gives students the opportunity to learn about the rich cultural heritage of Latin America through music, instruments, artifacts, and other materials.

Video Lending Library

Kellogg provides the Video Lending Library as a resource to area teachers who may be searching for films and documentaries related to Latin America. Teachers can view a list and description of all available titles on the outreach section of the Kellogg Web site as well as place orders directly through the site.

Acknowledgement of Financial Support

The Kellogg Institute gratefully acknowledges the financial support of the following organizations and individuals. Without this generous support, Kellogg would not be able to provide the diversity of programs or events to the academic community, students both at Notre Dame and beyond, and the policymaking community.

Our Commitment to Effective Stewardship

The Kellogg Institute is committed to effective stewardship of resources, strategic planning to set objectives and to tie resources to those objectives in carrying out our mission, and to operational effectiveness and efficiency.

The greater part of the Institute's budget goes to faculty programs, including support for Notre Dame faculty (19%) and the Visiting Fellows Program (20%). A growing portion of the Institute's total budget (18% in 2006–07, up from less than 10% in 2002–03) has been used to develop student programs.

We work hard to bring in outside resources to complement endowment funding. In 2006–07, 13% of the Institute's operating revenue came from external grants and gifts. The growth in student programs noted above was made possible by outside resources.

Despite rising costs, especially for benefits, we strive to keep administrative costs down.

Goulet: In Memoriam

Faculty Fellow DENIS A. GOULET, 75, died December 26, 2006 after a long battle with cancer.

Goulet was Professor Emeritus and O'Neill Chair in the Department of Economics and Policy Studies.

A pioneer in the interdisciplinary study of development ethics, Goulet most recently published his collected essays in Development Ethics at Work: Explorations 1960–2002 (Routledge, 2006). Altogether, Goulet authored over 160 articles and 11 books, including The Cruel Choice: A New Concept in the Theory of Development (Macmillan, 1971), The Uncertain Promise: Value Conflicts in Technology Transfer (Apex Press, 1977), and Development Ethics: A Guide to Theory and Practice (Apex Press, 1995), which was translated into Spanish (1999) and Chinese (2003).

The family requested that contributions in Goulet's memory be made to Amnesty International or Doctors Without Borders.

Advisory Board

The Kellogg Institute's new Advisory Board held its first meeting on September 22, 2006.

The Advisory Board meets regularly to review the Institute's progress and assist in charting future directions.

"We have tried to develop a Board comprised of very talented people who share high aspirations and deep affection for Notre Dame, as well as for the Kellogg Institute. We have diverse backgrounds—industry, finance, academia, professional service and political leadership—which should enable us to provide insights, counsel, and perhaps even the occasional good idea!"
