

Although I had graduated from Notre Dame much earlier and had special Holy Cross friends there, I had not previously crossed paths with Bob until we met at the Kellogg Institute in 1994 where I spent a year as a Faculty Fellow. We have enjoyed a wonderful friendship ever since and I have greatly appreciated Bob as a role model with his passion and energy for engaging in the hemisphere's issues of social justice and speaking truth to power while working through his Holy Cross, Notre Dame and other Church networks. His social engagements which I know about have brought him many times to Cuba, Central America and Chile and eventually his explorations and social commitment led him to dialogue with outstanding Christian activists in my beloved Bolivia. His determined dissemination of Archbishop Romero's vision and vocation was a terrific contribution to the world's understanding and appreciation of a Christian martyr in the service of the pueblo of El Salvador. Bob magnified the prophetic voices of our times and created his own in his comings and goings from Notre Dame to communities across the hemisphere.

Mil gracias Bob for your ongoing and tireless service to the cause of the poor and oppressed of Latin America and the Caribbean which continues to inspire me...

Kevin Healy

Although I had graduated from Notre Dame much earlier and had special Holy Cross friends there, I had not previously crossed paths with Bob until we met at the Kellogg Institute in 1994 where I spent a year as a Faculty Fellow. We have enjoyed a wonderful friendship ever since and I have greatly appreciated Bob as a role model with his passion and energy for engaging in the hemisphere's issues of social justice and speaking truth to power while working through his Holy Cross, Notre Dame and other Church networks. His social engagements which I know about have brought him many times to Cuba, Central America and Chile and eventually his explorations and social commitment led him to dialogue with outstanding Christian activists in my beloved Bolivia. His determined dissemination of Archbishop Romero's vision and vocation was a terrific contribution to the world's understanding and appreciation of a Christian martyr in the service of the pueblo of El Salvador. Bob magnified the prophetic voices of our times and created his own in his comings and goings from Notre Dame to communities across the hemisphere.

Mil gracias Bob for your ongoing and tireless service to the cause of the poor and oppressed of Latin America and the Caribbean which continues to inspire me...

Kevin Healy